Labor Relations Experts on Your Side

PASS is there to support you on the job. PASS has exclusive bargaining authority to negotiate working conditions for employees. The union negotiates contracts on behalf of all bargaining unit employees, but only PASS members have the right to vote to ratify those contracts. In addition, PASS members can provide input to the bargaining team during negotiations or even serve on that team. Without PASS, your wages, benefits, work schedules and working conditions would be dictated by management and the agency could change them at its discretion.

If you ever need to file a grievance, the PASS legal team will be there to provide assistance and support. The union also represents you during investigations or disciplinary matters. As a member of PASS, your voice is heard!

Professional Development

PASS provides organizing, legislative, representative and safety training to its members. In addition, as a PASS member, you can serve as a PASS liaison or subject matter expert on a variety of agency projects, allowing you to bring the voice of employees to the table. The opportunity to work directly with the agency on significant modernization efforts ensures not only your professional development but allows PASS to have direct input to ensure the successful advancement of the aviation system.

Your Voice on Capitol Hill

PASS serves as a voice for members on Capitol Hill and in legislative offices throughout the country. Federal employees are restricted in their ability to lobby Congress on certain issues. However, as a PASS member, you have additional protection and support to lobby on behalf of the union. This is especially important in today's environment where anti-federal employee legislation that would negatively affect pay, benefits and staffing is regularly introduced on Capitol Hill. In addition, it is imperative that PASS, through its members, educates lawmakers and the public on what you do as an FAA employee to ensure aviation safety.
